

Homeowners and Homeowners Basic Coverage Comparison

Dover Bay offers two choices for homeowners coverage – Homeowners and Homeowners Basic. To help you make the best choice, we have detailed below the primary differences between these two policies. For a comprehensive list of differences, refer to the chart that begins on page 2.

If you need more information, talk to your agent, who can help you make an informed decision.

- Homeowners covers accidental direct physical loss (subject to exclusions) on your real property. Homeowners Basic has more limited named-peril coverage for real property. You can't purchase accidental direct physical loss coverage with Homeowners Basic. See the coverage comparison below for more information about these differences.
- Homeowners offers an additional coverage amount equal to 25 percent of the real property limit for loss payment above the stated limit. This coverage is offered for no additional premium. Homeowners Basic doesn't provide an additional coverage amount above the real property limits.
- Homeowners provides 75 percent of the real property coverage limit for personal property. Homeowners Basic provides 40 percent of the real property coverage limit for personal property. You may increase the limits for an additional premium.
- Homeowners will pay replacement costs for wind- and hail-related roof losses. Homeowners Basic pays the actual cash value loss on wind- and hail-related roof losses. You can't purchase replacement cost coverage for wind and hail losses on roofs with Homeowners Basic.
- Homeowners provides real property loss settlement based on similar construction. Homeowners Basic provides real property loss settlement based on common construction.
- Homeowners has a Limited Replacement Cost Loss Settlement provision for personal property. Homeowners Basic has a Depreciated Value Loss Settlement provision.
